INFORMATION LETTER

The little dynamic potential of the world economy recovery after long recession and weak dynamics of international trade are becoming a challenge for the international and national financial institutions. How to cope with a task of simultaneous demand stimulation and inflation expectations fixation in the modern conditions without having undermined confidence of economic entities towards financial policy? Whether the modern disinflationary policies accepted in many countries are suitable not only for short-term period but for medium term period as well when the risk to enter a steady deflationary cycle is growing? Whether there are possibilities for launching of new economic growth round in the terms of oil price volatility, as well as protectionism growth and poor investments level?

All these issues are really vital for the Russian economy experiencing additional restrictions such as economic sanctions and poor conditions at the energy resource markets and need open discussions. The issues are going to be discussed within the panel discussions and round tables of the annual International scientific conference "Architecture of Finance" which has already proved its worth as a well-established platform where experts from the financial sector have an opportunity within open discussions negotiate the most demanded issues and offer new solutions.

The list of participants: the conference gathers the leading scientists and experts from Russian and overseas universities, from analytical centers, the representatives of federal financial authorities, as well as the representatives of regional administrations, foreign government agencies, Russian and foreign banks, insurance, investment, evaluation, venture and non-financial corporations
